DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322)

22

23

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF AUTHORITIESii
DEFENDANTS' FRCP 12(b)(1) MOTION TO DISMISS
I. RELEVANT FACTUAL BACKGROUND1
II. ARGUMENT4
A. Rule 12(b)(1) standard6
B. The Chamber's claims are not ripe6
C. Article III's standing requirements are not met, because no cognizable injury has been alleged, and because none of the alleged injuries are fairly traceable to the Ordinance nor redressable
1. The injuries alleged by the Chamber do not meet Article III standards12
(i) Speculative injuries like those alleged are not "certainly impending" as required by Article III
(ii) Self-inflicted harm is not a cognizable injury under Article III
(iii) Intent to violate the law is not a cognizable Article III injury 16
2. The other requirements of Article III standing are not met17
D. The Chamber does not have associational standing, because it does not meet any of the three prongs of the associational standing test
The Chamber has not identified its allegedly affected members as required for associational standing
2. The Complaint fails to establish that the Chamber is seeking to vindicate interests germane to its purpose
3. Individual member participation is required
III. CONCLUSION
CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) i

1 TABLE OF AUTHORITIES 2 Page(s) 3 CASES 4 Abbott Labs. v. Gardner, 5 Alaska Right to Life Political Action Comm. v. Feldman, 6 7 Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v. Superior Court, 46 Cal.4th 993, 209 P.3d 937 (Cal. 2009) .......21 8 Ariz. St. Leg. v. Ariz. Independent Redistricting Comm'n, 9 Aspen Grove Owners' Ass'n v. Park Promenade Apartments, LLC, 10 11 Associated Gen. Contractors of Cal., Inc. v. Coal. for Econ. Equity, 12 Associated General Contractors of Am., San Diego Chapter, Inc. v. Cal. Dept. of 13 14 Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colo., Inc., 479 U.S. 104 (1986)......22 15 Chandler v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 16 589 F.3d 1115 (9th Cir. 2010) ......6 17 City of Los Angeles v. Kern, 581 F.3d 841 (9th Cir. 2009) ......4 18 Clapper v. Amnesty Intern. USA, 19 20 Class Plaintiffs v. City of Seattle, 955 F.2d 1268 (9th Cir. 1992) ......20 21 Coalition for ICANN Transparency, Inc. v. Verisign, Inc., 22 23 DEFENDANTS' MOTION PETER S. HOLMES

DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) ii

Case 2:16-cv-00322-RSL Document 30 Filed 03/28/16 Page 4 of 33

Cole v. Oroville Union High School Dist., 228 F.3d 1092 (9th Cir. 2000)
Columbia Basin Apartment Ass'n v. City of Pasco, 268 F.3d 791 (9th Cir. 2001)
DaimlerChrysler Corp. v. Cuno, 547 U.S. 332 (2006)
Davis v. FEC, 554 U.S. 724 (2008)
Ed Nowogroski Ins., Inc. v. Rucker, 137 Wash.2d 427, 971 P.2d 936 (Wash. 1999)23
FedEx Home Delivery, 361 NLRB No. 55, 2014 WL 4926198 (2014)9
Fin. & Sec. Prods. Ass'n v. Diebold, Inc., No. C04-0437WHA, 2005 WL 1629813 (N.D. Cal. Jul. 8, 2005)22
Food & Water Watch, Inc. v. Vilsack, 79 F. Supp. 2d 174 (D.D.C. 2015)
Greene v. Dayton, 806 F.3d 1146 (8th Cir. 2015)2
Hangman Ridge Training Stables, Inc. v. Safeco Title Ins. Co., 105 Wash.2d 778, 719 P.2d 531 (Wash. 1986)
Hollingsworth v. Perry, 133 S. Ct. 2652 (2013)
Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Advertising Comm'n, 432 U.S. 333 (1977)
Int'l Longshoremen's Ass'n, AFL-CIO v. Davis, 476 U.S. 380 (1986)
Kingman Reef Atoll Investments, LLC v. United States, 541 F.3d 1189 (9th Cir. 2008)
Laird v. Tatum, 408 U.S. 1 (1972)
Lake Mohave Boat Owners Ass'n v. Nat'l Park Serv., 78 F.3d 1360 (9th Cir. 1995)

DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) iii

Case 2:16-cv-00322-RSL Document 30 Filed 03/28/16 Page 5 of 33

	Legal Aid Soc. of Haw. v. Legal Services Corp.,         145 F.3d 1017 (9th Cir. 1998)       18
	Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555 (1992)
	Maya v. Centex Corp., 658 F.3d 1060 (9th Cir. 2011)6
4	Mendia v. Garcia, 768 F.3d 1009 (9th Cir. 2014)15
4	Mont. Envt'l Info. Ctr. v. Stone-Manning, 766 F.3d 1184 (9th Cir. 2014)
	Munns v. Kerry, 782 F.3d 402 (9th Cir. 2015)
	Nat'l Family Planning & Reproductive Health Assoc., Inc. v. Gonzales, 486 F.3d 826 (D.C. Cir. 2006)5
 	Nissen v. Pierce County, 357 P.3d 45 (2015)24
 	Nelson v. King County, 895 F.2d 1248 (9th Cir. 1990)
	Pac. Nw. Generating Co-Op v. Brown,         38 F.3d 1058 (9th Cir. 1994)       19
	Pennsylvania v. New Jersey, 426 U.S. 660 (1976) (per curiam)
	Ranchers Cattlemen Action Legal Fund United Stockgrowers of Am. v. U.S. Dept. of Agric., 415 F.3d 1078 (9th Cir. 2005)
4	Reno v. Catholic Soc. Servs., Inc., 509 U.S. 43 (1993)6
 	San Diego County Gun Rights Committee v. Reno, 98 F.3d 1121 (9th Cir. 1996)
	Savage v. Glendale Union High Sch. Dist. No. 205, 343 F.3d 1036 (9th Cir. 2003)6

DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) iv

Case 2:16-cv-00322-RSL Document 30 Filed 03/28/16 Page 6 of 33

Sierra Club v. Morton, 405 U.S. 727 (1972)	18
Simon v. Eastern Ky. Welfare Rights Org., 426 U.S. 26 (1976)	13
Spinedex Physical Therapy USA Inc. v. United Healthcare of Ariz., Inc., 770 F.3d 1282 (9th Cir. 2014)	20
Summers v. Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488 (2009)	18
Texas v. United States, 523 U.S. 296 (1998)	6, 11
Thomas v. Anchorage Equal Rights Comm'n, 220 F.3d 1134 (9th Cir. 2000)	passim
UFW v. Ariz. Ag. Employment Relations Bd., 669 F.2d 1249, 1258 (9th Cir. 1982)	2
United Food & Commercial Workers Union Local 751 v. Brown Group, Inc., 517 U.S. 544 (1996)	20
Valley Forge Christian Coll. v. Americans United for Separation of Church & State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464 (1982)	12
Villegas v. Princeton Farms, Inc., 893 F.2d 919 (7th Cir. 1990)
Wash. State Grange v. Wash. State Republican Party, 552 U.S. 442 (2008)	7
Wisc. Dept. of Indus., Labor & Human Relations v. Gould Inc., 475 U.S. 282 (1986)	8
STATUTES, RULES, AND CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISION	ONS
15 U.S.C. § 26	21
29 U.S.C. § 152	2
Fed. R. Civ. P. 12	1, 6, 21
Revised Code of Washington
RCW 19.86.090	21
DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) v	PETER S. HOLMES Seattle City Attorney 701 Fifth Avenue, Suite 2050 Seattle, WA 98104 (206) 684-8200

Case 2:16-cv-00322-RSL Document 30 Filed 03/28/16 Page 7 of 33

1	RCW 19.108.01024
2	RCW 42.56.00123
3	RCW 42.56.01024
4	RCW 46.72.0012
5	RCW 81.72.2002
6	Seattle Municipal Code
7	SMC 1.04.0201
8	SMC 6.310.1101
	SMC 6.310.7353, 10, 24
9	Washington Consumer Protection Act
10	U.S. Const., Art. III, § 2
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23	·

DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) vi

2

4

5

67

8

9

10

1112

13

14

15

1617

18

19

20

21

22

23

DEFENDANTS' FRCP 12(b)(1) MOTION TO DISMISS

In this lawsuit, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States ("the Chamber"), on behalf of unidentified members, seeks the facial invalidation of an ordinance the Seattle City Council recently enacted to increase the safety and reliability of for-hire transportation services in the City of Seattle. The Ordinance's major provisions will not be implemented until 2017 at the earliest, and any possible impact on the Chamber's members depends upon the discretionary future decisions of numerous independent actors. Accordingly, the Chamber's claims are not ripe. In addition, the Chamber lacks standing to pursue its claims on behalf of its members. Because the Chamber's lawsuit presents a non-justiciable controversy this Court should dismiss all of the claims in this case for lack of jurisdiction under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1) or alternatively Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

I RELEVANT FACTUAL BACKGROUND

On December 14, 2015, the Seattle City Council passed the Ordinance Relating to Taxicab, Transportation Network Company, and For-Hire Vehicle Drivers ("the Ordinance"). See Complaint ¶29.¹ The Council enacted the Ordinance "to ensure safe and reliable for-hire and taxicab transportation service." Ordinance, Sec. 1(C). The Council explained that "driver coordinators"—the term used by the Ordinance to describe entities that provide for-hire transportation services to the public²—"establish the terms and conditions of their contracts with their drivers unilaterally, and may impose changes without advance warning or input from the drivers." Id. Sec. 1(E). In the Council's legislative judgment, this can adversely affect for-hire drivers' ability to provide "safe, reliable, stable, cost-effective, and economically viable" transportation service, and lead to unrest and service disruptions. Id. Sec. 1(E), (F). The Council determined, based on outcomes in other industries, that providing a means through which forhire drivers could address the terms and conditions of their contractual relationships collectively would improve the safety and reliability of for-hire transportation services by, among other things, reducing turnover, increasing driver commitment and experience, and alleviating the pressure drivers face to provide transportation services in an unsafe manner (such as by working too many hours, operating vehicles at unsafe speeds, or ignoring necessary maintenance). Id. Sec. 1(I), (J). The Council's authority to enact the Ordinance was provided by RCW 46.72.001 and RCW 81.72.200, which authorize Seattle to regulate for-hire and taxicab transportation services to ensure safety and reliability, and exempt such regulation from antitrust challenges.

&lt;sup>1</sup> The Ordinance and its Legislative Summary (which are official records of the Office of the City Clerk) are attached as Exhibit A to the Declaration of Michael Ryan ("Ryan Decl."). The Legislative Summary shows that the Ordinance was passed by the City Council on December 14 and returned by the Mayor unsigned on December 23, 2015. By City law, Seattle Municipal Code ("SMC") 1.04.020(B), the Ordinance took effect January 22, 2016, 30 days after the Mayor returned it to the Council.

&lt;sup>2</sup> See Ordinance, Sec. 2 (amending SMC 6.310.110). These "driver coordinators" include taxicab associations, transportation network companies (like Uber and Lyft), and other for-hire passenger services.

To permit the drivers who contract with driver coordinators to have input in establishing the terms and conditions of their contractual relationships with those driver coordinators, the Ordinance establishes a process by which independent contractor drivers who contract with Seattle's for-hire vehicle services may designate an "Exclusive Driver Representative" ("EDR") to negotiate with the driver coordinators. The Ordinance applies only to independent contractors, and expressly excludes from its coverage any driver who is an "employee" for purposes of the National Labor Relations Act ("NLRA"). Ordinance, Sec. 6.3

Although the Ordinance became law on January 22, its major provisions cannot take effect until the Director of the Seattle Department of Finance and Administrative Services

&lt;sup>3</sup> The NLRA excludes independent contractors, as well groups such as agricultural laborers, domestic workers, and public employees, from its definition of "employee." 29 U.S.C. §152(2), (3). Courts have previously recognized that, in excluding such workers, the NLRA leaves state and local governments free to regulate those workers' labor relations. See, e.g., Greene v. Dayton, 806 F.3d 1146, 1149 (8th Cir. 2015); UFW v. Ariz. Ag. Employment Relations Bd., 669 F.2d 1249, 1258 (9th Cir. 1982); Villegas v. Princeton Farms, Inc., 893 F.2d 919, 921 (7th Cir. 1990).

("Director") promulgates implementing regulations. Among other things, the Director still must establish the qualifications for entities to be designated as a "Qualified Driver Representative" ("QDR") eligible to serve as the EDR for drivers who contract with a particular driver coordinator; set a commencement date after which such entities may apply for QDR designation; and define which drivers are "qualifying drivers" eligible to participate in the EDR designation process. The Director must select a commencement date of 180 to 240 days after the Ordinance's effective date, Ordinance, Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(A)), but expects that date will be no sooner than September 19, 2016. Declaration of Douglas Carey ("Carey Decl.") ¶4. Entities have 30 days after the commencement date to apply to be a QDR, and the Director has 14 days to grant or deny such applications, Ordinance, Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(C)).

If an entity is designated as a QDR, it will have 14 days to notify a driver coordinator of its intent to represent that driver coordinator's drivers. Id. Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(C)(2)). Upon receipt of that notice, driver coordinators will have to provide a list of qualifying drivers to the QDR. Id. Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(D)). The QDR then will have 120 days to seek the support of a majority of the driver coordinator's qualifying drivers. Id. Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(F)(1)). If a QDR submits statements of support from a majority of those drivers, the Director will have 30 days to determine if the QDR should be designated as the EDR of those drivers. Id. Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(F)(2), (3)). If all of this occurs, the driver coordinator and the EDR must commence negotiations over certain specified subjects. Id. Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(H)(1)).

Based on the anticipated commencement date of September 19, 2016, it is unlikely that any QDR will be designated (and thus become able to request a list of qualifying drivers from a driver coordinator) before November 2, 2016 (44 days after the commencement date), or that any QDR will be designated an EDR until May 2017 (150 days thereafter). Carey Decl. ¶5.

The Chamber, which is not itself subject to the Ordinance, asserts that it has unidentified members that might be required to provide a list of qualifying drivers to a QDR or to engage in collective negotiations with an EDR at some point in the future. Complaint ¶14. It further alleges that, in anticipation of that possibility, its unnamed members have retained outside labor relations experts, and may hire additional labor relations personnel. Complaint ¶44. The Chamber also contends that "[s]ome" of its members want to require their drivers to agree not to provide statements of interest in support of any QDR, but that the Ordinance's anti-retaliation provisions (which do not take effect until June 2016, see Ordinance, Sec. 5) prohibit such a requirement. Complaint ¶46. The Chamber fails to identify any of these driver coordinators in its Complaint, and has refused to provide the City with the names of those members. Ryan Decl. ¶3.

II ARGUMENT

Article III, section 2 of the United States Constitution limits federal jurisdiction to actual "Cases" or "Controversies." Clapper v. Amnesty Intern. USA, 133 S. Ct. 1138, 1146 (2013).

Justiciability is a threshold question that must be resolved in every federal proceeding. City of Los Angeles v. Kern, 581 F.3d 841, 845 (9th Cir. 2009). Courts "must put aside the natural urge to proceed directly to the merits of [an] important dispute and to 'settle' it for the sake of convenience and efficiency," lest the Judiciary exceed its powers. Hollingsworth v. Perry, 133 S. Ct. 2652, 2662 (2013) (quotation omitted). "If a dispute is not a proper case or controversy, the courts have no business deciding it, or expounding on the law in the course of doing so." DaimlerChrysler Corp. v. Cuno, 547 U.S. 332, 341 (2006). The role of courts "is neither to issue advisory opinions nor to declare rights in hypothetical cases, but to adjudicate live cases or controversies consistent with the powers granted the judiciary in Article III of the Constitution."

4 5

Thomas v. Anchorage Equal Rights Comm'n, 220 F.3d 1134, 1139 (9th Cir. 2000) (en banc). Courts should assume the absence of jurisdiction unless the record affirmatively shows otherwise. See San Diego County Gun Rights Committee v. Reno, 98 F.3d 1121, 1126 (9th Cir. 1996). Whether relying on allegations or evidence, the Chamber "must demonstrate standing for each claim [it] seeks to press and for each form of relief that is sought." Davis v. FEC, 554 U.S. 724, 734 (2008) (quotation omitted).

This case should be dismissed on Article III grounds, both because it is unripe and because standing is not present. Initially, as explained in Section II.B., this case is not ripe for adjudication. It will be many months before the Ordinance has any potential impact on anyone, and there is much uncertainty—most of which is outside the City's control—about what might occur between now and then. That uncertainty precludes a finding of ripeness. The case should also be dismissed for lack of standing. As set forth in Section III.C., Article III's standing requirements are not met because the injuries alleged in the Complaint are insufficiently imminent and/or are self-inflicted, and because any such injury is neither traceable to the Ordinance nor redressable by the relief the Chamber requests. See Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555 (1992). And as explained in Section III.D., even if the Chamber could demonstrate that its unnamed members have standing in their own right, the Chamber cannot demonstrate that it has associational standing under Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Advertising Comm'n, 432 U.S. 333, 343 (1977), because the Chamber has not identified its injured members or established that its purpose is germane to interests vindicated by this action, and because the participation of its individual members would be required to adjudicate these claims.

In short, this case is not fit for judicial review, and should be dismissed.

A. Rule 12(b)(1) standard.

Motions challenging standing and ripeness are properly brought under Rule 12(b)(1) because they implicate a court's subject matter jurisdiction. See Chandler v. State Farm Mut.

Auto. Ins. Co., 589 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th Cir. 2010). A Rule 12(b)(1) attack "can be either facial, confining the inquiry to allegations in the complaint, or factual, permitting the court to look beyond the complaint." Savage v. Glendale Union High Sch. Dist. No. 205, 343 F.3d 1036, 1039 n.2 (9th Cir. 2003). Where a defendant challenges a complaint's allegations on their face, the court must accept as true all material allegations of fact, but need not accept bare legal conclusions. Maya v. Centex Corp., 658 F.3d 1060, 1068 & n.3 (9th Cir. 2011). Where a defendant challenges the evidentiary basis for those allegations, a plaintiff must present evidence to support those allegations, and the court must make findings of fact. Kingman Reef Atoll Investments, LLC v. United States, 541 F.3d 1189, 1195 (9th Cir. 2008). Here, the City brings both a facial and a factual challenge.

B. The Chamber's claims are not ripe.

The Chamber's lawsuit should first be dismissed because its claims are not ripe.

Ripeness derives from both constitutional limitations on judicial power and prudential reasons for deciding not to exercise jurisdiction. See Reno v. Catholic Soc. Servs., Inc., 509 U.S. 43, 57 n.18 (1993); Thomas, 220 F.3d at 1138. "[B]ecause the focus of our ripeness inquiry is primarily temporal in scope, ripeness can be characterized as standing on a timeline." Id. at 1138. "A claim is not ripe for adjudication if it rests upon contingent future events that may not occur as anticipated, or indeed may not occur at all." Texas v. United States, 523 U.S. 296, 300 (1998) (quotation omitted). Ripeness is "peculiarly a question of timing, designed to prevent the courts, through avoidance of premature adjudication, from entangling themselves in abstract disagreements." Thomas, 220 F.3d at 1138 (citations & quotations omitted). If the Chamber fails to meets its burden to demonstrate this case is prudentially ripe, the Court need not address constitutional standing or ripeness. See Alaska Right to Life Political Action Comm. v. Feldman, 504 F.3d 840, 849 (9th Cir. 2007).

The ripeness concerns here are particularly strong because the Chamber attacks the Ordinance on its face. Such challenges are "disfavored" not only because they are "contrary to the fundamental principle of judicial restraint" and "threaten to short circuit the democratic process by preventing laws embodying the will of the people from being implemented in a manner consistent with the Constitution," but also because they "often rest on speculation" and require courts to resolve important legal questions prematurely and without sufficient factual context. Wash. State Grange v. Wash. State Republican Party, 552 U.S. 442, 450-51 (2008) (citations & quotations omitted).

In assessing constitutional ripeness, courts in the Ninth Circuit consider three factors: (1) whether the party challenging the law faces "a realistic danger of sustaining direct injury as a result of the statute's operation and enforcement;" (2) whether there is a specific threat of enforcement of the challenged law; and (3) the history of the enforcement of the law in question. Thomas, 220 F.3d at 1139-41. In Thomas, two landlords who stated that they had discriminated against and would continue to discriminate against unmarried couples filed a challenge to state laws prohibiting rental discrimination on the basis of marital status. Id. at 1137. In concluding the challenge was not ripe, the en banc court said:

[A]ny threat of enforcement or prosecution against the landlords in this case—though theoretically possible—is not reasonable or imminent. The asserted threat is wholly contingent upon the occurrence of unforeseeable events: whether the landlords retain their rental properties; whether an unmarried couple will seek to lease available property; whether the couple, having been denied tenancy, will file a complaint or communicate the alleged discrimination to the enforcement agencies; and whether the enforcement agencies will decide to prosecute. The landlords do not at this time confront a realistic danger of sustaining a direct injury as a result of the statute's operation or enforcement, and thus this dispute is not justiciable, because it is not ripe for court review.

Id. at 1141 (quotations & citations omitted).

Like the landlords' challenge in Thomas, the claims here are not ripe because the Chamber cannot demonstrate that any of its members face any "realistic danger" of sustaining a direct and imminent injury as a result of the Ordinance. Whether any harm to the Chamber's members will occur depends on a series of contingent future events: first, whether after the Director promulgates regulations and establishes a commencement date, an entity seeks designation as a QDR; second, whether the Director determines that the entity meets the requirements for a QDR and so designates it; and third, whether the QDR announces its intent to seek to become the EDR for a driver coordinator that is a member of the Chamber, requiring that driver coordinator to turn over a list. Even assuming that turning over such a list constituted an actual injury, no member of the Chamber will be required to provide any QDR with a list of its qualifying drivers if any of these events fails to occur. And if an entity granted QDR status fails to garner support from a majority of qualifying drivers or is otherwise deemed ineligible to serve as the EDR for those drivers, no driver coordinator will be required to negotiate with an EDR.

That these events must occur before any challenge becomes ripe is no mere formality.

Instead, those events will necessarily shape the legal and factual issues presented in a challenge that is actually ripe. For example, the Chamber alleges that the Ordinance is preempted under the Garmon preemption doctrine, which prohibits states from regulating activities that are "arguably" protected or prohibited by the NLRA and thus subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of

2

3

4

5

6

the National Labor Relations Board ("NLRB"). Wisc. Dept. of Indus., Labor & Human Relations v. Gould Inc., 475 U.S. 282, 286 (1986). The Chamber argues that Garmon applies here because drivers who seek recognition of an EDR may be "employees" under the NLRA and therefore subject to the NLRB's jurisdiction. But the determination of whether such drivers are actually or even arguably "employees" under the NLRA depends upon the specific details of the relationship between a particular driver coordinator and its drivers, such as the degree of control that the coordinator exercises over its drivers, which cannot be evaluated in the abstract before any live controversy has arisen. See Int'l Longshoremen's Ass'n, AFL-CIO v. Davis, 476 U.S. 380, 394-95 (1986) (party claiming preemption must produce evidence showing workers at issue could reasonably be deemed "employees" under NLRA); FedEx Home Delivery, 361 NLRB No. 55, 2014 WL 4926198, at *3 (2014) (in determining whether workers are employees or independent contractors, NLRB "assess[es] and weigh[s]" eleven factors, none of which is "decisive," and ultimate conclusion rests "on the factual circumstances of each case"). It may also depend on whether the NLRB has made any determination about the "employee" status of a particular driver coordinator's drivers. See Complaint ¶28 (discussing status of Uber drivers). Moreover, until the Director has promulgated the necessary regulations, it will be impossible (absent pure speculation) to know what steps the Director will take to prevent conflicting determinations of employment status as between the NLRB and the City. In short, any potential Garmon preemption issue cannot even begin to be addressed until it is known which driver coordinator's drivers are at issue (if any), so that their particular circumstances can be analyzed.

Ultimately, the Chamber appears to believe that its claims are ripe because its members are retaining labor relations experts to prepare their responses to the Ordinance, and because they are voluntarily complying with the anti-retaliation provisions of the Ordinance. But as the Ninth

11

12

10

13

1415

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

<sup>4</sup> The Chamber's effort to manufacture a ripe controversy by arguing that its members wish to procure signed agreements by their drivers not to authorize a QDR to represent them is particularly unconvincing. If the Ordinance is preempted, as the Chamber contends, then there is no reason for its members to procure such agreements, because the authorizations have no legal force. If the Ordinance is lawful, then its members have no right to demand such agreements. What the Chamber seeks is simply an advisory opinion to assuage its unnamed members' subjective fears. See, e.g., Laird v. Tatum, 408 U.S. 1, 13-14 (1972) ("subjective 'chill" inadequate for Article III standing).

Circuit held in Thomas, "neither the mere existence of a proscriptive statute nor a generalized threat of prosecution satisfies the 'case or controversy' requirement." 220 F.3d at 1139 (citing San Diego County Gun Rights Committee, 98 F.3d at 1126-27). Such voluntary actions are inadequate to establish constitutional standing, as explained below, let alone to establish that an abstract controversy regarding the legality of a local ordinance is ripe for judicial review. Just as in Thomas, whether any person will respond to the Chamber's members' acts by investigating or initiating enforcement, and whether that enforcement will result in any consequences, is contingent and speculative, and the threat is not imminent. See, e.g., Ordinance, Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(M)(1)(b)) ("Director may investigate" violations and penalties may only issue upon written notice and opportunity to cure).<sup>4</sup>

Even assuming the Chamber can establish constitutional ripeness, this court should decline to exercise its jurisdiction based on prudential concerns. In the context of ripeness, two considerations guide the court: "'the fitness of the issues for judicial decision and the hardship of withholding court consideration." Thomas, 220 F.3d at 1141 (quoting Abbott Labs. v. Gardner, 387 U.S. 136, 149 (1967)). Given all the facts that must be developed and events that must occur before the merits of the Chamber's claims can be evaluated, this case is simply not fit for judicial review. Courts "do not decide constitutional questions in a vacuum." Thomas, 220 F.3d at 1141 (quotation omitted); see also Alaska Right to Life, 504 F.3d at 849 (reversing district court on prudential ripeness grounds for lack of a "concrete factual situation"). This Court should entertain questions regarding the Ordinance's legality only at the appropriate time, which is most certainly not before any implementing regulations have been issued and before any facts regarding its application to actual drivers and driver coordinators are available.

The Chamber cannot establish that its members will suffer any hardship if jurisdiction is withheld. This is not a case like Abbott, for example, where the regulation being challenged had a "direct effect on the day-to-day business" of the plaintiffs because the plaintiffs were compelled to affix certain labels on their product under the threat of criminal penalties. 387 U.S. at 152. Indeed, the hardship analysis "dovetails, in part, with the constitutional consideration of injury." Thomas at 1142. As explained below, none of the injuries of which the Chamber complains are "certainly impending," which is what Article III requires. See infra Part II.C.1.(i).<sup>5</sup>

For all of these reasons, this "dispute is more an abstraction than an actual case because the supposed injury has not materialized and may never materialize." Mont. Envt'l Info. Ctr. v. Stone-Manning, 766 F.3d 1184, 1190 (9th Cir. 2014). It is far too speculative to determine whether any of the harms raised by the Chamber will ever come to pass. Courts should be presented with concrete factual situations before they determine whether a duly enacted law is inconsistent with the Supremacy Clause. After all, the States and their municipalities are the "laboratories" of democracy, Ariz. St. Leg. v. Ariz. Independent Redistricting Comm'n, 135 S. Ct. 2652, 2673 (2015), and prematurely adjudicating the constitutionality of the Ordinance does nothing to foster this cornerstone of our federalist system.

C. Article III's standing requirements are not met, because no cognizable injury has been alleged, and because none of the alleged injuries are fairly traceable to the Ordinance nor redressable.

&lt;sup>5</sup> Because the Ordinance "has yet to be interpreted" by Washington courts, "postponing consideration" of the issues here has the added advantage "of permitting the state courts further opportunity to construe the provisions" of the Ordinance. Texas, 523 U.S. at 301 (1998) (quotation omitted).

45

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

1415

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

The Chamber has the burden to establish constitutional standing. Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561. Article III standing has three essential elements:

First, the plaintiff must have suffered an injury[-]in[-]fact—an invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and particularized, and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical. Second, there must be a causal connection between the injury and the conduct complained of—the injury has to be fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant, and not the result of the independent action of some third party not before the court. Third, it must be likely, as opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.

Id. at 560-61 (internal quotations, alterations and citations omitted). The Chamber has not alleged facts establishing that any driver coordinator could establish these three elements of standing, and the Chamber cannot, months or years before the Ordinance affects anyone, provide any evidence to prove such standing.

1. The injuries alleged by the Chamber do not meet Article III standards.

The injuries the Chamber asserts its members allegedly face from the Ordinance do not suffice to meet the requirements of Article III. Most of the injuries that the Chamber alleges are insufficiently imminent, because their occurrence depends upon a chain of speculative contingencies including actions by third parties not before this Court. The remaining injuries are self-inflicted and therefore not cognizable.

(i) Speculative injuries like those alleged are not "certainly impending" as required by Article III.

The injury that forms the basis for Article III standing must be present "at the commencement of the litigation," Davis, 554 U.S. at 732, and must be either "actual" or else "certainly impending." Lujan, 504 U.S. at 564 n.2 (emphasis in original). Demonstrating proof of a non-conjectural and imminent injury ensures that legal issues "will be resolved, not in the

1

5

7

9

13

rarified atmosphere of a debating society, but in a concrete factual context conducive to a realistic appreciation of the consequences of judicial action." Valley Forge Christian Coll. v. Americans United for Separation of Church & State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 472 (1982). When a party claims future injury, the Ninth Circuit has "repeatedly reiterate[d] that threatened injury must be certainly impending to constitute injury in fact and that allegations of possible future injury are not sufficient." Munns v. Kerry, 782 F.3d 402, 409 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting Clapper, 133 S. Ct. at 1147) (emphasis in original; alterations omitted).

"[U]nadorned speculation" about future events is insufficient "to invoke the federal judicial power." Simon v. Eastern Ky. Welfare Rights Org., 426 U.S. 26, 44 (1976). So is a theory that depends upon "a highly attenuated chain of possibilities." Clapper, 133 S. Ct. at 1148; see also Cole v. Oroville Union High School Dist., 228 F.3d 1092, 1100 (9th Cir. 2000) (injury of students and parents too speculative where it "depends upon highly speculative assumption that a student seeking to give a sectarian speech or prayer will be chosen as valedictorian or salutatorian, or will be elected by classmates to give an invocation"); Nelson v. King County, 895 F.2d 1248, 1252 (9th Cir. 1990) (rejecting standing based on "extended chain of highly speculative contingencies"). That is particularly true when the theory of injury rests upon speculation concerning the actions of third parties. Thus, for example, in Clapper, a group of human rights and labor attorneys claimed that "some of the people with whom they exchange foreign intelligence information [were] likely targets of" a surveillance program they sought to challenge on constitutional grounds, and so there was an "objectively reasonable likelihood that their communications with their foreign contacts w[ould] be intercepted" under the challenged statute. 133 S. Ct. at 1145, 1146-47. This theory of injury did not suffice for Article III purposes, because it rested on speculation about whom the government would target for surveillance under

3

56

7

8

11

10

12 13

14

15

16

17

18 19

20

21

2223

that statute and whether the surveillance would be approved by a court. Id. at 1148-50. In reaching this conclusion, the Court "decline[d] to abandon [its] usual reluctance to endorse standing theories that rest on speculation about the decisions of independent actors." Id. at 1150.

In the instant case, any harms allegedly resulting from one of the Chamber's members having to turn over a list of drivers to a QDR (Complaint ¶47-48), to recognize and negotiate with an EDR as the collective representative of its drivers (e.g, id. ¶¶55, 63, 66-67), and/or to "incur additional costs of doing business" as a result (id. ¶55), rest upon a number of speculative contingencies including decisions and actions by third parties. Any purported injury that results from having to release a driver list will occur only if (1) an entity seeks designation as a QDR; (2) the Director determines that the entity fulfills the requirements for such designation; (3) the QDR seeks to represent the drivers of a driver coordinator that is a member of the Chamber and requests its list of drivers; and (4) the Director determines that the drivers at issue are independent contractors and the driver coordinator is subject to the Ordinance. Further alleged injuries will occur only if (1) the QDR then obtains statements of interest from a majority of drivers so that the Ordinance requires the driver coordinator to recognize it as an EDR, and (2) the subjects or nature of the negotiations that ensue are those of which the Chamber complains. All of these contingencies depend upon the independent discretionary decisions and actions of entities that might or might not seek designation as a QDR and might or might not seek to become the EDR of a particular group of drivers. See, e.g., Complaint ¶47 (pointing to statements of intent by a Seattle labor union).

While the Ordinance may allow for such actions, it by no means requires them; the Chamber's fears are thus "necessarily conjectural." Clapper, 133 S. Ct. at 1149; see also San Diego County Gun Rights Committee, 98 F.3d at 1130 (rejecting injury based on increased price of weapons when law did not require increases so harm depended on decisions by third-party manufacturers and dealers). Put simply, it is only the actions of non-parties that can make the Chamber's speculative fears a reality. If, but only if, those actions occur, an injury-in-fact may then exist. The Chamber's speculative future harms are not "certainly impending," and are therefore insufficient to satisfy Article's III injury-in-fact requirement.

(ii) Self-inflicted harm is not a cognizable injury under Article III.

The Chamber alleges that its members are suffering present and imminent harm in that they have begun to hire labor relations experts and may hire labor relations personnel "to prepare for the potential organizing and bargaining activity that the Ordinance contemplates" and "have started and will continue to expend both time and money to educate their drivers about the disadvantages of choosing to be represented by an EDR." Complaint ¶¶44-45.

However, a litigant cannot "be heard to complain about damage inflicted by its own hand." Pennsylvania v. New Jersey, 426 U.S. 660, 664 (1976) (per curiam); see also Clapper, 133 S. Ct. at 1143, 1145-46, 1151 (fact that labor and human rights organizations had undertaken "costly and burdensome" measures in response to surveillance threat could not establish standing; "respondents cannot manufacture standing by choosing to make expenditures based on hypothetical future harm that is not certainly pending"); Lujan, 504 U.S. at 564 n.2 (when "the acts necessary to make the injury happen are at least partly within the plaintiff's own control," courts "have insisted that the injury proceed with a high degree of immediacy, so as to reduce the possibility of deciding a case in which no injury would have occurred at all"); Nat'l Family Planning & Reproductive Health Assoc., Inc. v. Gonzales, 468 F.3d 826, 831 (D.C. Cir. 2006) ("We have consistently held that self-inflicted harm doesn't satisfy the basic requirements for standing. Such harm does not amount to an 'injury' cognizable under Article III."); Mendia v.

allege "substantial risk' that [] future harm would occur" for standing purposes). That the Chamber's members wish to spend money in certain ways is an exclusively self-inflicted injury.

Garcia, 768 F.3d 1009, 1013 n.1 (9th Cir. 2014) (holding "self-inflicted injury" insufficient to

As the Supreme Court has emphasized, parties cannot "manufacture standing merely by inflicting harm on themselves." Clapper, 133 S. Ct. at 1151 (citations omitted); see also Food & Water Watch, Inc. v. Vilsack, 79 F. Supp. 3d 174, 196 (D.D.C. 2015) ("In other words, a plaintiff cannot transform a remote risk into a concrete injury merely by taking steps to avoid that risk; to hold otherwise would eliminate the injury-in-fact requirement entirely because plaintiff's actions are always within plaintiff's control."). At bottom, if the Chamber's unnamed members have elected to harm themselves in response to the Ordinance's enactment, or taken preemptive steps to prepare for its impact almost a year in advance, such self-inflicted harms do not create an injury-in-fact sufficient to create Article III standing.

(iii) Intent to violate the law is not a cognizable Article III injury.

Finally, the Chamber alleges that "[s]ome of [its] members" want to amend their driver contracts to prohibit drivers from providing statements of interest to QDRs seeking to represent them. Complaint ¶46. But this allegation also cannot establish standing, because those members do not face any specific threat of prosecution. See San Diego Gun Rights Committee, 98 F.3d at 1126-28 (plaintiffs' alleged future plan to violate law but did not specify time or date and "a general threat of prosecution is not enough to confer standing"); cf. Thomas, 220 F.3d at 1139. The Ordinance makes enforcement discretionary, the City will provide an opportunity to correct

&lt;sup>6</sup> While Clapper's discussion occurred in the context of Article III's second requirement (fairly traceable), the same basic principle applies in the context of Article III's first prong (injury-in-fact). See, e.g., Munns v. Kerry, 782 F.3d 402, 410 (9th Cir. 2015) (applying Clapper). In any event, the same arguments would support dismissal on the ground that the injuries are not fairly traceable to the Ordinance.

6

9

11

13 14

15

16

17

18

19

2021

22

23

any violation before imposing penalties under the Ordinance's anti-retaliation provisions, and the agreements the Chamber's members seek are in any event legally meaningless. See supra note 4.

2. The other requirements of Article III standing are not met.

The Chamber's primary fear—that drivers will seek a collective voice in negotiations over certain issues—is not fairly traceable to the Ordinance because the Chamber itself alleges that the question whether these drivers are employees under the NLRA is an open one. See Complaint ¶27-28, 87. If the NLRB ultimately determines that such drivers are employees, they will be allowed to unionize regardless of the terms of the Ordinance.

That prospect also means that the Chamber's injury is not redressable by the relief it requests. Given the ongoing efforts at unionization that the Chamber alleges, see Complaint ¶28, the Chamber's unnamed members will still have to hire labor relations consultants and undertake efforts to dissuade their drivers from attempting to unionize. Thus, the complained of harms would not necessarily be redressed by striking down the Ordinance.

D. The Chamber does not have associational standing, because it does not meet any of the three prongs of the associational standing test.

Claiming no injury of its own, the Chamber rests its standing upon that of its members. Complaint ¶14. To demonstrate "associational standing," the Chamber must establish that "(a) [its] members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right; (b) the interests [it] seek[s] to protect are germane to [its] purpose; and (c) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit." San Diego County Gun Rights Committee, 98 F.3d at 1131 (citing Hunt, 432 U.S. at 343). The Chamber does not satisfy any of these requirements.

1. The Chamber has not identified its allegedly affected members as required for associational standing.

The Chamber's associational standing fails at the first step because the Chamber has not identified members that would have standing in their own right. "[T]he 'injury in fact' test requires more than an injury to a cognizable interest. It requires that the party seeking review be himself among the injured." Sierra Club v. Morton, 405 U.S. 727, 734-35 (1972) (emphasis added). An association claiming standing through its members must identify at least one member with an Article III injury and support that identification with affidavits establishing that member's injury. See Summers v. Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488, 498 (2009); Lujan, 504 U.S. at 563; Legal Aid Soc. of Haw. v. Legal Services Corp., 145 F.3d 1017, 1030-31 (9th Cir. 1998).

The Chamber's Complaint does not meet this threshold requirement. Even if it were assumed that the Chamber's allegations of injury were sufficiently concrete and imminent to satisfy Article III (which they are not, see infra Section II.C.1), the Complaint does not identify any members who would suffer those injuries. Repeatedly, the Complaint simply asserts that some members are affected without identifying them.<sup>7</sup> When the City requested this information, the Chamber refused to provide the names of its allegedly affected members. Ryan Decl. ¶3.

The Chamber's failure to identify members that are actually suffering or will suffer Article III injuries from the Ordinance requires dismissal of its Complaint. See Associated General Contractors of Am., San Diego Chapter, Inc. v. Cal. Dept. of Transportation, 713 F.3d 1187, 1194-95 (9th Cir. 2013) (dismissing appeal for lack of jurisdiction because associational standing not shown when group failed to "identify any affected members by name" or to &lt;sup>7</sup> See, e.g., Complaint ¶¶14 ("[s]ome" members "are subject to the Ordinance"), 44 (unnamed "members have incurred, and will continue to incur, substantial costs as a direct result of the Ordinance"; also referring to "these companies" and "these member companies), 45 (unidentified "members have started and will continue to expend both time and money" campaigning against collective representation), 46 ("Some of the Chamber's members" want to require drivers to sign agreements promising not to provide statement of interest to QDR).

"submit[] declarations by any of its members attesting to harm they have suffered or will suffer under [the challenged] program"); Coalition for ICANN Transparency, Inc. v. Verisign, Inc., 452 F. Supp. 2d 924, 933-36 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (dismissing complaint where associational plaintiff failed to identify an injured member). Because the City also raises a factual challenge to standing, moreover, the Chamber is required to identify such injured members through affidavits, not simply through allegations in pleadings.

Demanding that the Chamber name members with standing at the outset of the suit is not an empty formalism. Neither the City nor the Court can adequately test whether an allegedly aggrieved member has standing where the Complaint leaves one to guess about who that member is. Without knowing which members are allegedly affected, it is impossible to determine whether an entity is actually subject to the Ordinance (because the Ordinance only covers certain companies, and other companies may be exempt if their drivers are employees) and what type of harm, if any, that entity will suffer from the Ordinance's application.

2. The Complaint fails to establish that the Chamber is seeking to vindicate interests germane to its purpose.

In order to meet Hunt's second prong, the Chamber's purpose must be germane to the interests it seeks to vindicate in this action. See Ranchers Cattlemen Action Legal Fund United Stockgrowers of Am. v. U.S. Dept. of Agric., 415 F.3d 1078, 1103-04 (9th Cir. 2005) (environmental interests not germane to purposes of association organized to protect its members' "trade and marketing interests"); Pac. Nw. Generating Co-Op v. Brown, 38 F.3d 1058, 1063 (9th Cir. 1994) (employees' and customers' aesthetic and recreational interests in salmon not germane to purposes of business organizations representing direct purchasers of hydropower). While the Chamber alleges that it "routinely advocates on matters of federal

1112

13 14

15

16

17

18

19

2021

22

23

antitrust and labor relations policy and represents the interests of its members in antitrust and labor relations matters before the courts," Complaint ¶13, it neither identifies what those member interests are, nor sets forth its own organizational purpose. Thus, the Chamber's allegations do not establish its associational standing to bring this action. See Class Plaintiffs v. City of Seattle, 955 F.2d 1268, 1286 (9th Cir. 1992) (denying associational standing where record was "barren of any evidence concerning [party's] organizational purpose or of the grounds which bring its membership together beyond the bald assertions set forth in [its] brief").

3. Individual member participation is required.

The Chamber also lacks associational standing as to several of its claims because the individual participation of its unidentified members is necessary. Hunt requires that neither the claim nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members. Although a request for injunctive and declaratory rather than damages typically involves a form of relief that can be provided without requiring individual members' participation, see, e.g., United Food & Commercial Workers Union Local 751 v. Brown Group, Inc., 517 U.S. 544, 553-54 (1996); Columbia Basin Apartment Ass'n v. City of Pasco, 268 F.3d 791, 799 (9th Cir. 2001), the third requirement for associational standing is not limited to the relief requested. Rather, to have associational standing, the Chamber must establish that neither the relief requested nor the claim proffered demands individualized proof from the association's members. See Associated Gen. Contractors of Cal., Inc. v. Coal. for Econ. Equity, 950 F.2d 1401, 1408 (9th Cir. 1991). When variations in the individualized circumstances of an association's members affect the nature of their injuries or claims, those claims "are not susceptible to judicial treatment as systematic policy violations that make extensive individual participation unnecessary," and associational standing is improper. Spinedex Physical Therapy USA Inc. v. United Healthcare of Ariz., Inc.,

3

12

14

15

1617

18

19

2021

22

23

770 F.3d 1282, 1293 (9th Cir. 2014) (internal quotation marks and ellipses omitted). Here, several of the Chamber's claims demand that the allegedly injured members participate, and the Chamber thus lacks associational standing to pursue those claims on its members' behalf.

Federal and state antitrust claims.

The Washington Consumer Protection Act ("CPA") does not permit an association to sue on behalf of its members. The CPA grants a cause of action (whether for injunctive relief or damages) only to a "person who is injured in his or her business or property." RCW 19.86.090; see also Hangman Ridge Training Stables, Inc. v. Safeco Title Ins. Co., 105 Wash.2d 778, 792, 719 P.2d 531, 539 (Wash. 1986) (injury to the plaintiff is indispensable element of private CPA claim). An association asserting a CPA claim on behalf of its members cannot satisfy the third part of the Hunt test, because the association must establish that each member upon whom it relies for standing suffered an injury within the scope of the CPA. See Aspen Grove Owners' Ass'n v. Park Promenade Apartments, LLC, No. CV09-1110, 2010 WL 4860345, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 19, 2010). Even if that were not the case, the CPA by its terms allows private suits only by an injured person, and thus prohibits associational standing. See Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v. Superior Court, 46 Cal.4th 993, 1004, 209 P.3d 937, 944 (Cal. 2009) (California unfair competition statute providing private right of action only to "person who has suffered injury in fact" barred suit by association on behalf of injured members). Accordingly, this Court can alternatively treat this motion as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion and dismiss the Chamber's CPA claim for lack of statutory standing.

Similarly, a party seeking injunctive relief under federal antitrust law must rely on Section 16 of the Clayton Act, which permits claims by a party "threatened [with] loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws." 15 U.S.C. § 26. The Chamber does not contend it is threatened with loss or damage, only that its members might be. But any analysis of the damage to the Chamber's members resulting from implementation of the Ordinance will require detailed factual inquiries regarding the impact of the Ordinance on those individual members' operations, market share, and financial performance, and any injunction must be tailored to the loss or damage to those members. The court cannot evaluate the impact of the Ordinance on the Chamber's members or accomplish the necessary tailoring without their participation.

In the alternative, this Court should hold that the Chamber does not have statutory standing to seek injunctive relief on behalf of its members under federal antitrust law. To pursue a claim under the federal antitrust laws, the plaintiff must do more than show an injury-in-fact; the plaintiff must establish that it has suffered or will imminently suffer an "antitrust injury"— i.e., an injury "of the type the antitrust laws were designed to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colo., Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 113 (1986) (quotation omitted). Further, the plaintiff "must prove it has or will suffer antitrust injury itself." Fin. & Sec. Prods. Ass'n v. Diebold, Inc., No. C04-04347WHA, 2005 WL 1629813, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jul. 8, 2005). Accordingly, even if the Chamber could establish associational standing under Hunt (which it cannot do both because such a claim involves individualized proof of injury and because any antitrust injury its members might suffer is entirely speculative, dependent on the conduct of third parties, and non-imminent), the federal antitrust laws require that actions for injunctive relief thereunder be pursued by the individuals who have actually suffered an antitrust injury, rather than by an associational representative. Id.

Garmon Preemption. The Chamber's Garmon preemption claim similarly demands the participation of its members. It is not enough for a party claiming Garmon preemption to point to some theoretical argument about the applicability of the NLRA. Instead, the "party asserting pre-emption must advance an interpretation of the Act that is not plainly contrary to its language and that has not been authoritatively rejected by the courts or the [National Labor Relations] Board," and must "put forth enough evidence to enable the court to find that the Board reasonably could uphold a claim based on such an interpretation." Int'l Longshoremen's Ass'n, 476 U.S. at 395 (internal quotation omitted). In other words, the Chamber must put forth evidence that the workforce of a specific member of the Chamber is comprised of drivers who are arguably employees rather than independent contractors under the NLRB's multi-factor, fact-specific analysis. See supra at 8-9. Even if that question were ripe for review (which it is not), any answer would depend upon the specific factual circumstances of the driver coordinator in question, and any injunctive relief would necessarily be tailored to that coordinator's specific circumstances—such as by providing for expiration of the injunction should the NLRB determine that the coordinator's drivers are independent contractors or should the coordinator make a material change in the drivers' working conditions that clarifies their status as independent contractors. The participation of individual Chamber members whose driver workforces might "arguably" be subject to the NLRA is thus required for any litigation of the Chamber's Garmon preemption claim. See, e.g., Lake Mohave Boat Owners Ass'n v. Nat'l Park Serv., 78 F.3d 1360, 1367 (9th Cir. 1995) (member participation required where legal issues involved member-by-member variations and therefore required "individualized proof").

23

Public Records Act. Finally, the Chamber contends that the Ordinance violates Washington's Public Records Act, RCW 42.56.001 et seq., because it allows for the disclosure of its members' "trade secret" driver lists, which it claims are "public records." To pursue such a claim, the Chamber's members must demonstrate that they treat those lists as trade secrets, i.e. that they derive economic value because of their secrecy and have taken reasonable efforts to

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

22

23

21

DEED IN AN

keep the lists secret. Ed Nowogroski Ins., Inc. v. Rucker, 137 Wash.2d 427, 438, 971 P.2d 936, 942 (Wash. 1999); RCW 19.108.010(4).<sup>8</sup> That fact-specific and individualized determination requires the participation of the Chamber's members in this proceeding.

In any event, even assuming that disclosure of a driver list would constitute an injury-infact for standing purposes, and even assuming that a challenge to this requirement were ripe and appropriately litigated by an association, this would allow the Chamber to challenge only the disclosure provision of the Ordinance, Sec. 3 (adding SMC 6.310.735(D)). It would not provide any basis for challenging the Ordinance's other provisions, because the Chamber "must demonstrate standing for each claim [it] seeks to press and for each form of relief that is sought." Davis, 554 U.S. at 734 (quotation omitted).

III CONCLUSION

For these reasons, this Court should dismiss the case on the ground that the Chamber's claims are not ripe and the Chamber lacks standing.

DATED this 28th day of March, 2016.

PETER S. HOLMES Seattle City Attorney

By: /s/Michael K. Ryan WSBA #32091

Gregory C. Narver, WSBA#18127 Jessica Nadelman, WSBA#27569 Robert Tad Seder, WSBA#14521 Josh Johnson, WSBA#33570

&lt;sup>8</sup> As the City will demonstrate if and when a PRA claim is justiciable (which it is not presently), a PRA challenge to the Ordinance's requirement that driver coordinators provide lists of drivers to QDRs is wholly without merit and borders on the frivolous. The PRA applies only "when an agency is requested to disclose public records." Nissen v. Pierce County, 183 Wash.2d 863, 873, 357 P.3d 45, 51 (Wash. 2015) (emphasis added). The Chamber does not, nor could it ever, allege that any of its allegedly impacted members are "public agencies" under the PRA. See RCW 42.56.010(1) (defining "agency"). Therefore, the PRA is not even implicated and cannot create a protectable interest. Put simply, the PRA has no concern with the exchange of information between two private actors.

Assistant City Attorneys Seattle City Attorney's Office 701 Fifth Avenue, Suite 2050 Phone: (206) 684-8207 - Michael K. Ryan Phone: (206)684-8233 - Gregory C. Narver Phone: (206)386-0075 – Jessica Nadelman Phone: (206)727-8498 - Robert Tad Seder Phone: (206)386-1099 – Josh Johnson Fax: (206) 684-8284 E-mail: michael.ryan@seattle.gov E-mail: gregory.narver@seattle.gov E-mail: jessica.nadelman@seattle.gov E-mail: tad.seder@seattle.gov E-mail: josh.johnson@seattle.gov STEPHEN P. BERZON (pro hac vice) STACEY M. LEYTON (pro hac vice) P. CASEY PITTS (pro hac vice) Altshuler Berzon LLP 177 Post Street, Suite 300 San Francisco, CA 94108 Phone: (415) 421-7151 Fax: (415) 362-8064 E-mail: sberzon@altber.com sleyton@altber.com cpitts@altber.com Attorneys for Defendants

2

3

5

_

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on this 28th day of March, 2016, I electronically filed this DEFENDANTS' FRCP 12(b)(1) MOTION TO DISMISS, Declaration of Douglas Carey and Declaration of Michael Ryan, with the Clerk of the Court using the CM/ECF system, which will send notification of such filing to the below-listed:

Timothy J. O'Connell Noel J. Francisco Steven P. Lehotsky Jacqueline M. Holmes Christian G. Vergonis Warren Postman Lily Fu Claffee Robert Stander tim.oconnell@stoel.com nfrancisco@jonesday.com slehotsky@uschamber.com jholmes@jonesday.com cvergonis@jonesday.com wpostman@uschamber.com lfclaffee@uschamber.com rstander@jonesday.com

DATED this 28th day of March, 2016, at Seattle, Washington.

By:

/s/Michael K. Ryan

Michael K. Ryan, WSBA #32091 michael.ryan@seattle.gov

DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS (16-cv-00322) - 26